Agreement and Consent for Psychotherapy Services

This document provides you, the client, with information that is additional to that detailed in the Notice of Privacy Practices and it is subject to HIPAA preemptive analysis. It also contains important information about Dr. Heather Stone's professional services and business policies. Please read it carefully and jot down any questions you might have so that they can be discussed at the first meeting. Once you have signed this document, it will represent an agreement between yourself and Dr. Heather Stone. However, you are free to discontinue services at any time.

THE PROCESS OF THERAPY / EVALUATION AND SCOPE OF PRACTICE: If this is your first visit with a therapist, or if you have had prior experiences with therapy, there are certain things you need to know about what to expect from this work, and what your rights are as a client.

Participation in therapy can result in a number of benefits to you, including reduction in symptoms, improved relationships, solutions to specific problems, and movement towards a value-driven life. However, until such improvement occurs, there may be times where you could experience feelings like anxiety, sadness, guilt, anger, frustration, loneliness, or helplessness. Because this treatment challenges avoidance strategies and utilizes "exposure-based" techniques, certain interventions, particularly in the beginning of therapy, can produce a temporary increase in distress or anxiety before the reduction in symptoms is achieved. If at any time you feel uncomfortable with any subject, you may decline to address it at that session. While Dr. Stone's style is very interactive, it is you who ultimately decides what or when to self-disclose. Dr. Stone will do her very best to respect your level of readiness and to move forward at a pace that allows you to feel emotionally safe. If you have any questions or concerns about your treatment, you should discuss them with Dr. Stone whenever they arise.

Psychotherapy is not like a visit to the medical doctor; it calls for very active participation on your part. Positive outcomes in therapy depend largely upon the client's sincere efforts both during and between sessions. Psychotherapy also requires your honesty and openness in order to change your thoughts, feelings, and/or behaviors. Dr. Stone will ask for your feedback and views on your therapy, its progress, and other aspects of the therapy and will expect you to respond openly and honestly.

Therapy involves a large commitment of time, money, and energy, so you should be very careful about the therapist you select. Two important influences on the successful outcome of therapy include the therapeutic alliance (a good "fit" between therapist and client), as well as the therapist's area or areas of expertise. If Dr. Stone believes at any time that the treatment you need falls outside the scope of her practice, or if Dr. Stone becomes concerned that this work may not provide you with significant improvement, she may refer you to another mental health professional by providing you with names of other persons or agencies.

Dr. Stone does not provide custody evaluation recommendations or legal advice, nor does she prescribe medications, as these activities do not fall within her scope of practice. However, Dr.

Stone can, within the scope of her training, provide limited education regarding the classifications and mechanisms of certain psychotropic drugs and their appropriate uses for various psychiatric disorders. This important part of her training allows Dr. Stone to better collaborate with other medical professionals and to monitor clients with respect to their symptoms and/or medication compliance.

Sometimes more than one approach can be helpful in dealing with a certain conditions or situations. During the course of therapy, Dr. Stone is likely to draw on various psychological approaches that would best address the problem that is being treated. These approaches include, but are not limited to: cognitive-behavioral techniques, exposure-based therapy, skill-based homework assignments, mindfulness and acceptance strategies, counter-intuitive approaches or paradoxical interventions, assertiveness training, insight-oriented problem solving, relaxation training and abdominal breathing, assigned books, handouts or worksheets, and psycho-education.

Dr. Stone may challenge some of your assumptions or perceptions or propose different ways of looking at, thinking about, or handling situations. During evaluation or therapy, remembering or talking about unpleasant events, feelings, or thoughts can result in considerable discomfort, difficult emotions, or an exacerbation of symptoms. Likewise, practicing new behaviors as you move forward can cause you to feel upset, angry, depressed, challenged, or even disappointed at times. Attempting to resolve issues that brought you to therapy in the first place, such as personal or interpersonal relationships, may result in changes that were not originally intended. Psychotherapy may result in decisions about changing behaviors, employment, substance use, schooling, housing, or relationships. Sometimes a decision that is positive for one family member is viewed quite negatively by another family member. Change will sometimes be easy and swift, but can also be slow and even frustrating. There is no guarantee that psychotherapy will yield positive or intended results.

COLLATERAL SESSIONS: Dr. Stone does not provide couple or family therapy, but will occasionally invite a significant person/s in the client's life to attend one or more sessions, if the client so chooses. These "collateral" sessions are for the purpose of gathering a more complete psychosocial history, providing education to the collateral, and/or including the collateral as an integral part of the client's treatment plan. The main reason for a collateral visit is to further or enhance the treatment goals and interests of the client. Collaterals may include the client's parent/s, child, sibling, partner, colleague or friend. When the collateral participates in therapy with the client, the client is not mandated to sign an "Authorization to Release -- Collateral" form because their appearance with the client means that implied consent has been given by the client. Collaterals do not have the right to access the client's records in any circumstance. If the client authorizes Dr. Stone to speak with the collateral when the client is not present, the client needs to complete and sign an "Authorization to Release – Collateral" form and the collateral needs to sign the "Psychotherapy Collateral Agreement" form. Simply paying for the client's fees does not create a collateral relationship unless the person who pays is specifically designated by the client as a collateral. Likewise, a collateral is not responsible for the fees of the session/s, unless that person has been responsible for the fees all along, as often happens when the collateral is the parent of a client.

MEETINGS: The initial evaluation typically spans 1 to 2 sessions. During this time, both you and Dr. Stone will consider whether she is the best person to provide the services you need in order to meet your treatment goals. Dr. Stone will also be able to offer you with some first impressions of what the work will include and a possible treatment plan, should you decide to continue with therapy. You should evaluate this information along with your own impressions, since you are ultimately the consumer who is receiving these services.

The therapeutic hour is 50-minutes, with a 10-minute break between sessions. In the beginning of treatment, the sessions should occur weekly so that you can experience a sense of momentum and continuity. If your situation or symptoms significantly improve, it may be appropriate to change the frequency of sessions, perhaps to every other week. Conversely, during times of crisis and/or an exacerbation of symptoms, it might be necessary to consider longer or more frequent sessions. Ultimately, it is Dr. Stone's responsibility to keep track of the therapeutic hour so that you can fully immerse yourself in the process without worrying about the time. Occasionally Dr. Stone may inform you a few minutes before the end of the session that the time is winding down, so that you may have the opportunity to leave the session feeling composed or complete.

TELEPHONE & EMERGENCY PROCEDURES: If you need to contact Dr. Stone between sessions, please leave a message at (707) 291-7386 and your call will be returned as soon as possible. Dr. Stone checks her messages during the daytime only, unless she is out of town. If she is unavailable for an extended period of time, such as away on vacation, she will provide you with the name of a colleague to contact, if necessary. There are many times when Dr. Stone is not immediately available or is in session with another client. Other circumstances, such as poor cell reception, may cause Dr. Stone to be unavailable by telephone. In these instances, it is best to leave a message on her voicemail with your phone number and some good times to reach you, and she will return the call as soon as she is able. If an emergency situation arises, please indicate the nature of emergency clearly in your message, and also call 911 or go to the nearest hospital. If you need to talk to someone right away, call Psychiatric Emergency Services in Santa Rosa at (707) 576-818, or 911. Please do not use email, texts, or faxes for emergencies. Dr. Stone does not always check her email, texts, or faxes daily.

FEES, INSURANCE, and CANCELLATION POLICY: Dr. Stone's fee for clinical work is $160 per hour, and the fee for services will be established at or prior to the first meeting. The fee is collected at the time of each session. Clients are encouraged (but not required) to pay at the beginning of the session so that they can increase their attention during the session and feel undisturbed at the end.

Dr. Stone's hourly fee applies to other professional services, such as telephone conversations lasting longer than ten minutes, site visits, attendance at meetings with other professionals you have authorized, writing or reading of records or reports, preparation of records, reports or treatment summaries, consultation with other professionals regarding clinical, legal or ethical issues, releases of information, longer sessions, travel time, and the time spent performing any other relevant service.

If Dr. Stone is mandated to appear in a legal proceeding that involves you, you will be expected to pay for her professional time even if she is called to testify by another party. Because of the difficulty of legal involvement, Dr. Stone's hourly fee may increase for preparation and attendance at any legal proceeding. Dr. Stone's fee for services may be increased at the beginning of the year, but should this increase take place it will be discussed with you within one month prior to that change. You will be expected to pay for each session at the beginning of the hour, unless it is agreed otherwise.

CANCELLATION and ILLNESS: Since the scheduling of an appointment involves the reservation of time specifically for you, a minimum of 24 hours notice is required for re-scheduling or canceling an appointment. If you cancel an appointment in less than 24 hours, the full fee will be charged for sessions missed without such notification. Occasionally clients become ill on the same day as their scheduled appointment, and are unsure about whether or not to cancel. In that situation (and particularly if there is a chance that you might be contagious), you agree to cancel your appointment even on short notice in order to respect the health of the other occupants in the building.

OUTSTANDING BALANCES: If your account has not been paid for more than 30 days and arrangements for payment have not been agreed upon, Dr. Stone reserves the right to use legal means to secure the payment. This may involve hiring a collection agency or going through small claims court. If such legal action is necessary, all costs associated with same will be included in the claim. In most collection situations, the only information Dr. Stone releases regarding a client's treatment for collection purposes is his/her name, the nature of services provided, the dates of unpaid services, and the amount due.

PAYMENTS & INSURANCE REIMBURSEMENT: Dr. Stone is not a participating member/provider of any insurance company and her office policy is to accept a direct payment from the client at the time of each session. Dr. Stone does not carry balances for clients or accept insurance payments directly, and it is not the policy of this office to wait for the client to receive insurance or other reimbursements before receiving payment for her services. Clients who carry insurance should remember that professional services are rendered and charged to the clients and not to the insurance companies. If you have insurance that allows coverage for out-of-network providers, Dr. Stone will be glad to provide you with a statement (sometimes called a "superbill") on a monthly basis, which you can then submit to your insurance company for reimbursement. Please be aware that submitting a mental health invoice for reimbursement carries a certain amount of risk. Not all issues/conditions/problems, which are dealt with in psychotherapy, are reimbursed by insurance companies. It is your responsibility to verify the specifics of your coverage.

Dr. Stone is not a Medicare provider, and even if you are eligible for receiving Medicare coverage for psychological services, you agree to waive your right to bill Medicare by signing an "Opt-Out Agreement" with Dr. Stone. If you are currently covered by Medicare or expect to be covered in the near future, you agree to notify Dr. Stone so that the Opt-Out Agreement can be executed in a timely fashion.

CONFIDENTIALITY: All information disclosed within sessions and the written records pertaining to those sessions are confidential and may not be revealed to anyone without your written permission except where disclosure is required by law.

WHEN DISCLOSURE IS REQUIRED OR MAY BE REQUIRED BY LAW: There are a few exceptions to confidentiality, and these include situations in which Dr. Stone is legally required to take action to protect someone from harm, even if she has to reveal some information about a client's treatment. Some of the circumstances where disclosure is required or may be required by law are: where there is a reasonable suspicion of child, dependent, or elder abuse or neglect; where a client presents a danger to self, to others, to property, or is gravely disabled; or when a client's family members communicate to Dr. Stone that the client presents a danger to others. These reports are mandated if Dr. Stone's suspicion is reasonable and if she learns about such events during her professional capacity. Sometimes the suspected perpetrator of abuse is not the client but rather a third party, such as a client's neighbor, friend, or family member. Or, it can include a perpetrator from the client's past that currently poses certain risks to potential victims, such as children in near proximity. Even in these unusual situations, Dr. Stone may be required to break confidentiality in order to protect someone. Dr. Stone may also be required to take other protective actions such as notifying a potential victim, contacting the police, or seeking hospitalization for the client. If the client threatens to harm himself/herself, Dr. Stone may be obligated to seek hospitalization for that person or to contact family members or others who can help to provide that person's safety.

LITIGATION LIMITATION: Due to the nature of the therapeutic process and the fact that it often involves making a full disclosure with regard to many matters which may be of a confidential nature, it is agreed that, should there be legal proceedings (such as, but not limited to divorce and custody disputes, injuries, lawsuits, etc.), neither you nor your attorney(s), nor anyone else acting on your behalf will call on Dr. Stone to testify in court or at any other proceeding, nor will a disclosure of the psychotherapy records be requested unless otherwise agreed upon. In some proceedings, however, a judge may determine that the client has expressly or implicitly waived the right to confidentiality, in which case a therapist might be required to give testimony. If any of these situations were to occur, Dr. Stone will make every effort to fully discuss them with you before taking any action. Disclosure may also be required pursuant to a legal proceeding by or against you. If you place your mental status at issue in litigation initiated by you, the defendant may have the right to obtain the psychotherapy records and/or testimony by Dr. Stone.

EMERGENCY: If there is an emergency during therapy, or in the future after termination, where Dr. Stone becomes concerned about your personal safety, the possibility of you injuring someone else, or about you receiving proper psychiatric care, she will do whatever she can within the limits of the law, to prevent you from injuring yourself or others and to ensure that you receive the proper medical care. For this purpose, she may also contact the person whose name you have provided on the patient information form.

HEALTH INSURANCE & CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS: Disclosure of confidential information may be required by your health insurance carrier or HMO/

PPO/MCO/EAP in order to process the claims. If you so instruct Dr. Stone, only the minimum necessary information will be communicated to the carrier. Dr. Stone has no control over, or knowledge of, what insurance companies do with the information she submits or who has access to this information. You must be aware that submitting a mental health invoice for reimbursement carries a certain amount of risk to confidentiality, privacy or to future capacity to obtain health or life insurance or even a job. The risk stems from the fact that mental health information is likely to be entered into big insurance companies' computers and is likely to be reported to the National Medical Data Bank. Accessibility to companies' computers or to the National Medical Data Bank database is always in question as computers are inherently vulnerable to hacking and unauthorized access. Medical data has also been reported to have been legally accessed by law enforcement and other agencies, which also puts you in a vulnerable position.

CONSULTATION: Dr. Stone consults regularly with other professionals regarding her clients; however, each client's identity remains completely anonymous and confidentiality is fully maintained.

E-MAILS, CELL PHONES, COMPUTERS, AND FAXES: It is very important to be aware that computers and unencrypted e-mail, texts, and e-faxes communication can be relatively easily accessed by unauthorized people and hence can compromise the privacy and confidentiality of such communication. E-mails, texts, and e-faxes, in particular, are vulnerable to such unauthorized access due to the fact that servers or communication companies may have unlimited and direct access to all e-mails, texts and e-faxes that go through them. While data on Dr. Stone's laptop is encrypted, e-mails and e-faxes are not. It is always a possibility that e-faxes, texts, and email can be sent erroneously to the wrong address and computers. Unencrypted email or text provides as much privacy as a postcard. You should not communicate any information with your health care provider that you would not want to be included on a postcard that is sent through the Post Office. Dr. Stone's laptop is equipped with a firewall, a virus protection and a password, and she backs up all confidential information from her computer on a regular basis onto an encrypted hard-drive. Also, be aware that phone messages are transcribed and sent to Dr. Stone via unencrypted e-mails. Please notify Dr. Stone if you decide to avoid or limit, in any way, the use of e-mail, texts, cell phones calls, phone messages, or e-faxes. If you communicate confidential or private information via unencrypted e-mail, texts or e-fax or via phone messages, Dr. Stone will assume that you have made an informed decision, will view it as your agreement to take the risk that such communication may be intercepted, and she will honor your desire to communicate on such matters. Please do not use texts, e-mail, voice mail, or faxes for emergencies.

RECORDS AND YOUR RIGHT TO REVIEW THEM: Both the law and the standards of Dr. Stone's profession require that she keep treatment records for at least 6 years. Unless otherwise agreed to be necessary, Dr. Stone retains clinical records only as long as is mandated by California law. If you have concerns regarding the treatment records, please discuss them with Dr. Stone. As a client, you have the right to review or receive a summary of your records at any time, except in limited legal or emergency circumstances or when Dr. Stone assesses that releasing such information might be harmful in any way. In such a case, Dr. Stone will provide the records to an appropriate and legitimate mental health professional of your choice. Considering all of the above exclusions, if it is still appropriate, and upon your request, Dr. Stone will release information to any agency/person you specify unless Dr. Stone assesses that releasing such information might be harmful in any way. When more than one client is involved in treatment, such as in cases of couple and family therapy, Dr. Stone will release records only with signed authorizations from all the adults (or all those who legally can authorize such a release) involved in the treatment.

MEDIATION & ARBITRATION: All disputes arising out of, or in relation to, this agreement to provide psychotherapy services shall first be referred to mediation, before, and as a pre-condition of, the initiation of arbitration. The mediator shall be a neutral third party chosen by agreement of Dr. Stone and the client(s). The cost of such mediation, if any, shall be split equally, unless otherwise agreed upon. In the event that mediation is unsuccessful, any unresolved controversy related to this agreement should be submitted to and settled by binding arbitration in (your county, state) in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association which are in effect at the time the demand for arbitration is filed. Notwithstanding the foregoing, in the event that your account is overdue (unpaid) and there is no agreement on a payment plan, Dr. Stone can use legal means (court, collection agency, etc.) to obtain payment. The prevailing party in arbitration or collection proceedings shall be entitled to recover a reasonable sum as and for attorney's fees. In the case of arbitration, the arbitrator will determine that sum.

TREATMENT PLANS: Within a reasonable period of time after the initiation of treatment, Dr. Stone will discuss with you her working understanding of the problem, treatment plan, therapeutic objectives, and her view of the possible outcomes of treatment. If you have any unanswered questions about any of the procedures used in the course of your therapy, their possible risks, Dr. Stone's expertise in employing them, or about the treatment plan, please ask and you will be answered fully. You also have the right to ask about other treatments for your condition and their risks and benefits.

DUAL RELATIONSHIPS: Despite a popular perception, not all dual or multiple relationships are unethical or avoidable. However, dual relationships should never be sexual or exploitative in nature, and any other dual relationship that is agreed upon is considered not to impair Dr. Stone's objectivity and/or clinical judgment. Dr. Stone will assess carefully before entering into non-sexual and non-exploitative dual relationships with clients. It is important to realize that in some communities, particularly small towns, military bases, university campus, etc., multiple relationships are either unavoidable or expected. Dr. Stone will never acknowledge working with anyone without her written permission. Many clients have chosen Dr. Stone as their therapist because they knew her before they entered therapy with her, and/or are personally aware of her professional work and achievements.

Nevertheless, Dr. Stone will discuss with you the often-existing complexities, potential benefits and difficulties that may be involved in dual or multiple relationships. Dual or multiple relationships can enhance trust and therapeutic effectiveness but can also detract from it and often it is impossible to know which ahead of time. It is your responsibility to advise Dr. Stone if the dual or multiple relationship becomes uncomfortable for you in any way. Dr. Stone will always listen carefully and respond to your feedback and will discontinue the dual relationship if she finds it interfering with the effectiveness of the therapy or your welfare and, of course, you can do the same at any time.

SOCIAL NETWORKING AND INTERNET SEARCHES: At times, Dr. Stone may conduct a web search on her clients before the beginning of therapy or during therapy. If you have concerns or questions regarding this practice, please discuss them with her. She does not accept friend requests from current or former clients on social networking sites, such as Facebook. She believes that adding clients as friends on these sites and/or communicating via such sites is likely to compromise their privacy and confidentiality. For this same reason, she request that clients not communicate with her via any interactive or social networking web sites.

TERMINATION: As set forth above, after the first couple of meetings, Dr. Stone will assess if she can be of benefit to you. Dr. Stone does not work with clients who, in her opinion, she cannot help. In such a case, if appropriate, she will give you referrals that you can contact. If at any point during psychotherapy Dr. Stone either assesses that she is not effective in helping you reach the therapeutic goals or perceived you as non-compliant or non-responsive, and if you are available and/or it is possible and appropriate to do, she will discuss with you the termination of treatment and conduct pre-termination counseling. In such a case, if appropriate and/or necessary, she would give you a couple of referrals that may be of help to you. If you request it and authorize it in writing, Dr. Stone will talk to the psychotherapist of your choice in order to help with the transition. If at any time you want another professional's opinion or wish to consult with another therapist, Dr. Stone will give you a couple of referrals that you may want to contact, and if she has your written consent, she will provide her or him with the essential information needed. You have the right to terminate therapy and communication at any time. If you choose to do so, upon your request and if appropriate and possible, Dr. Stone will provide you with names of other qualified professionals whose services you might prefer.

CLOSURE: The ending of therapy is often a positive experience, representing the completion of important psychological work. While all of us are a "work in progress," with ongoing lessons and unfolding challenges, we are also entitled to decide, to the extent that we are able, when the significant chapters of our lives should end. If you choose to terminate therapy for any reason, you are encouraged to do so with conscious awareness and forward planning, allowing yourself to review the important work you have done, and to express any feelings you may have about saying goodbye. To that end, it is ideal to work collaboratively toward closure and within a large enough timeframe, so that Dr. Stone can adequately support your leaving. It is Dr. Stone's experience that clients who leave with only 1-2 weeks' notice do not always have enough time for successful resolution of the therapeutic work.

While this Consent for Psychotherapy Services should prove helpful in informing you about certain laws, guidelines, and office policies, it is important that you discuss any questions or concerns that you may have with Dr. Stone at the first meeting. While she will be happy to discuss any of these issues with you, please keep in mind that the laws governing confidentiality are quite complex, and she is not an attorney.
